Proceedings of Congress
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE
UNITED STATES
WEDNESDAY, January 20.

Continued.

Mr. Stone and Mr. Boudinot spoke. Mr. Boudinot opposed Mr. Smith, by referring to the practice of the House on the subject of conferring a title on the President of the United States; for, after they had determined to give no other title or title but that of the President of the United States, the Senate did apply to them to appoint a committee of conference which was complied with, and both committees agreed that no other title or title should be conferred on the President, but the President of the United States.

Mr. Sherman thought this a subject not of such importance as to occasion so much delay, and wished it to be settled. Mr. R. B. Lee moved, that the House be taken, whether the decision of taking up the unfinished business of the last session, de novo, should be abided by or rejected.

Mr. White was a war that some contention might arise, from refusing to appoint a committee in this instance.

Mr. Jackson thought it right to appoint a committee to confer with the committee of the Senate, and saw no danger from such a procedure.

Mr. Clymer spoke so low as not to be heard distinctly.

It was at length carried to appoint a committee of five, and Mr. Sherman, Mr. Trotter, Mr. White, Mr. Har- ley, and Mr. Jackson, were appointed.

Mr. R. B. Lee then moved, that the said committee be intrusted by the House to inform the committee of the Senate, that this House had already decided upon the practice of taking up the unfinished business of the last session de novo.

Mr. White thought these instructions would be unnecessary, as the Senate must have known already of this decision.

Mr. Livermore was against invading the committee; if the committees were re-frilled, perhaps they would not meet upon equal ground. The business of committees was to investigate, and therefore should not be re-frilled.

The House then adjourned till 11 o'clock to-morrow.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,

March 4, 1790.

In obedience to the order of the House of Representatives, of the 2d instant
THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY,
Respectfully reports.

THE Secretary conceiving the decision of the House to have been to obtain from him a general deliberation only of the funds, competent in his judgment to the provision in question, has refrained from those details, which would be indispensable, if that provision were immediately to be made; and to have furnished which would have occasioned greater delay than would probably, have suited with the present state of the convenience of the House. He with great deference trusts, that what is now offered will be deemed a satisfactory compliance with their order.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON,
Secretary of the Treasury.

PHILADELPHIA, April 19.

Died on Saturday night, the 17th instant, in the 85th year of his age, the illustrious BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, L. E. D. The world has been so long in possession of such extraordinary proofs of the singular abilities and virtues of this friend to mankind, that it is impossible for newspapers to enclose his fame, or to convey his name to a part of the civilized globe, where it is not already known and admired.

We are favored with the following short account of Doctor FRANKLIN's last illness, by his attending Physician.

THE Stone, of which he had been afflicted for several years, had for the last twelve months confined him chiefly to his bed; and during the extreme paroxysms, he was obliged to take large doses of laudanum to mitigate his tortures; still in the intervals of pain, he not only amused himself with reading and conversing cheerfully with his family and a few friends, who visited him, but was often employed in doing business of a public as well as private nature, with various persons, who waited on him for that purpose; and in every instance displayed, not only that readiness and disposition of doing good, which was the distinguishing characteristic of his life, but the fullest and clearest possession of his uncommon mental abilities; and not infrequently indulged himself in those l'air de esprit and entertaining anecdotes, which were the delight of all who heard him.

About sixteen days before his death, he was seized with a feverish indisposition, without any particular symptoms attending it till the third or fourth day, when he complained of a pain in his left breast, attended with a cough and laborious breathing. During this state, when the severity of his pain sometimes drew forth a groan of complaint, he would observe, that he was afraid he did not bear them as he ought; acknowledging his grateful sense of the many blessings he had received from the Supreme Being who had raised him from small and low beginnings, to such high rank and consideration among men; and made no doubt his present afflictions were kindly intended to wean him from a world, in which he was no longer fit to act the part assigned him. In this frame of body and mind he continued till five days before his death, when his pain and difficulty of breathing entirely left him, and his family were flattering themselves with the hopes of his recovery, when an imposthumation which had formed itself in his lungs suddenly burst, and discharged a great quantity of matter, which he continued to throw up while he had sufficient strength to do it, but, as that failed, the organs of respiration became gradually oppressed; a calm lethargic state succeeded; and on the 17th instant, about eleven o'clock at night, he quietly expired, closing a long and useful life of eighty four years and three months.

It may not be amiss to add to the above account, that Dr. Franklin, in the year 1735, had a severe plauy, which terminated in an abscess of the left lobe of his lungs, and he was then almost suffocated with the quantity and suddenness of the discharge. A second attack of a similar nature happened some years after this, from which he soon recovered, and did not appear to suffer any inconvenience in his respiration from these diseases.

Thursday the Supreme Executive Council of Pennsylvania agreed to wear mourning for one month, in memory of their great and good fellow-citizen, DR. FRANKLIN.

IN CONGRESS,

New-York, Thursday, April 22.

Mr. Madison made the following motion: Mr. Speaker, as we have been informed not only through the channel of the newspapers, but by a more direct communication, of the decease of an illustrious character, whose native genius has rendered distinguished services to the cause of science and of mankind in general; and whose patriotic exertions have contributed in a high degree to the independence and prosperity of this country in particular; the occasion seems to call upon us to pay, some tribute to his memory expressive of the tender veneration his country feels for such distinguished merit. I therefore move the following resolution:

"The House being informed of the decease of Benjamin Franklin, a citizen whose native genius was not more an ornament to human nature, than his various exertions of it have been precious to science, to freedom, and to his country, do resolve, as a memory, that the members wear the customary badge of mourning for one month.

On the question, this motion passed without a division.

LEXINGTON, May 31.

On Sunday the twenty third inst as a company of people were going home from meeting on Brashiers's creek, they were fired on by a party of Indians, and one man killed, and a woman taken prisoner; they were immediately followed by a party, and when likely to be overtaken, killed the woman, and departed so that they could not be followed any farther.
